"Talkspace was founded on the mission to democratize therapy and to make quality mental health care affordable, accessible, and convenient for everyone," said Katelyn Watson, Chief Marketing Officer at

Talkspace. "As the demand for mental health services and interest in teletherapy continues to grow, we are proud to have built a model for mental health care that allows for greater accessibility to reach more members, whether they're paying for their treatment out-of-pocket or increasingly through their insurance plan or employer. We have tremendous pride in how we provide high quality therapy, and are truly honored and greatly appreciative of Verywell Mind's recognition of our work."

Verywell Mind evaluated 55 online therapy companies and 25 therapist directories, in addition to surveying over 10,000 therapy users on top criteria they consider when choosing a service, including affordability, credibility, accessibility and user satisfaction. A special emphasis was placed on companies that offer inclusive support and those that service therapy deserts, making therapy more inclusive and attainable for all. The process for testing and analyzing nominees was created by Verywell Mind editors with guidance from mental health experts Amy Marschall, PsyD, Nic Hardy, PhD, LCSW, and Hannah Owens, LMSW, who helped evaluate and test each service.
